Boys and Girls of the Kitimat Valley Educational Kit

What was it like living and going to school in the Kitimat Valley over 100 years ago? This program will look at aspects of a child's work and play around the turn of the 20th century.

Household/farming activities and their associated objects and outcomes will be explored as students learn what chores they would have been expected to do – including how these jobs differ from, or are similar to modern day life.

Using material from the Kitimat Museum teaching collection and a PowerPoint presentation with from our archival collection, the students will experience everyday life from a child's perspective.

Several early settler family experiences will be explored and related to the children. The lives of the Braun family and the Anderson family will be most closely examined.

If you decide to have this program in your classroom, an instructor and assistants will arrive at your classroom 15 to 20 minutes before the program is scheduled to begin. This Museum group will set up the technical equipment and organize the artifacts, then introductions will be made and the program will begin.

Objectives:

At the end of this program, the participants should:

- Say why they have enjoyed the museum's visit to their classroom.
- Know what chores were performed by children at the turn of the century and how they are different from chores of today.
- Be able to name and identify some of the tools and utensils the pioneers used to maintain a house and farm, as well as recognize how these tools are the same or different from those tools and utensils used today.
- Know the variety of tasks carried out by early settlers.
- Know about the newcomers who settled in our valley and the reasons they came here.

Timing:

Introduction: 5 minutes

PowerPoint 15 minutes

This presentation is primarily photographs taken from the museum collection showing individuals that lived in the Kitimat Valley over 100 years ago, explaining why they chose to live here and what life was like for the children and their families.

Hands on Activities 45 minutes

- Make a Whirly-gig—a simple toy made with string and a button
- Artifact Exploration— objects that would have been used in Pioneer days
- Water carrying—we simulate the chore of carrying water
- Shoe polishing (for older kids)

The ability to deliver all hands on activities is dependent on volunteers.
